LOCATION SOUND NOTES FROM ASIA-PACIFIC · ISSUE 01 · JULY 2026

★ 2026 EMMY NOMINEE · SOUND MIXING

Dear friends,

Nearly twenty years ago I started my first newsletter from a flat on Mt Eden Road, Auckland, New Zealand. I was two years into my career and I wrote back then: “I am here to stay.” Still true. The map just got bigger. I’m now based in Singapore, working across Asia-Pacific, and this letter restarts here.

Before the notes, a quick word to honour Sam Neill. Every morning on Hunt for the Wilderpeople my first job was wiring Sam, he was my grounding cue for the day ahead with his classic stoic manner. The best people give so much to those around them without seeming to try and Sam was one of the very best.

3 WORTH KNOWING IN THE REGION

Lord of the Flies is out, and Emmy-nominated for sound. Our BBC adaptation, shot almost entirely on location in the Langkawi rainforest, is streaming now across our region: Stan (AU), TVNZ+ (NZ), Rock Entertainment (ASEAN) and Netflix (US). The show earned two 2026 Emmy nominations for sound. I’m named on the Outstanding Sound Mixing nomination, and the post team earned Outstanding Sound Editing. On the ground I mixed with my crew, Adyt Santoso on boom and Reza Feryanto on utilities. Without them I’m a head without arms. Four months of monsoon storms, hunting frenzies, and boys who never stood still. How did we keep the dialogue clean? See below.

Netflix is doubling down on Southeast Asia. While others pull back, the 2026 slate runs 20+ originals across Indonesia, Thailand and the Philippines, backed by a new two-year partnership with Indonesia’s producers’ association. I keep a running map of what’s shooting in our region. Take a look.

Melbourne and Sydney, in person. I spent a week on the ground this month reconnecting with the Aussie scene: producers, directors, the rental floor. Australia and New Zealand, you’ll be seeing more of me. I’m on the ground more in both countries now.

Waiting on the snow. Netflix’s first series set and filmed in New Zealand is rolling in Queenstown. I was in the Netflix Sydney office last month. Their team is already down there, waiting on the snow before the ski scenes roll.

Wisycor changed hands in ANZ. Professional Audio and Television (PAT), Sydney and Auckland, is now the exclusive Wisycor distributor for Australia and New Zealand. I met Mike and Pat, fabulous guys who I suspect enjoy a barbecue as much as a sale. My kit is Wisycor throughout, and I carry Lectrosonics too, so I drop straight into US and UK crews without a re-rig.

The whole drama package fits in suitcases. 12 Wisycor radios, DPA mics, two booms, Sound Devices, timecode, all airline-checkable. On set anywhere in ASEAN in a day, ANZ the next.

Kit for hire across the region. Beyond my own jobs, I now rent Wisycor RF packages throughout ASEAN and offer full dry-hire sound kit for crews working here: radios, timecode, IFB, the lot. If you're covering a shoot in the region and need gear that just works, please ask.

1 PROBLEM SOLVED: DIALOGUE BESIDE A WATERFALL

On Lord of the Flies we had a full scene played metres from a waterfall, a noise floor you cannot fight in post. The save wasn't one trick but a stack. Boom in as tight as the frame allowed. DPA capsules rigged and re-rigged as costumes shed. And the part that made post's day: a library of surround wild tracks captured in pristine resolution on the Sennheiser AMBEO VR mic, so the world could be rebuilt naturally in post. Watch it in my showreel (around 1:20) at schurrsound.com/#reel. (Booms: Adyt Santoso · Utilities: Reza Feryanto.)

Me, Adyt and Reza heading in, Langkawi, with our KL intern Dhanusha keeping us honest. The further back you stand, the bigger the bag.

“When the location pushes back, the sound stays clean.”

AVAILABILITY

Aug to Dec 2026: open for drama and documentary runs across ASEAN, Australia and New Zealand. Between runs I take corporate and documentary days in Singapore and Malaysia. Film school students and first-year grads in Singapore and Malaysia: I keep a special rate for your projects. I was there once. Please ask. To you all, if you have even 20 minutes when I'm in your city, the coffee's on me, just like 2007.

Warmest regards,

Ande Schurr
